

Jacaranda Ensemble

Music for alpenhorn, didgeridoo, saxophone and percussion

Five young musicians, principals of the Brandenburg Symphony, have put together an unusual ensemble as a result of a desire to experiment with new sounds. The instrumentation of this ensemble clearly demonstrates this idea: Alpenhorn, didgeridoo, saxophone, and percussion, instruments whose origins often are thousands of miles apart, which are woven through a mixture of composed and improvised music into a musical tapestry.

Through its music, the JACARANDA ENSEMBLE builds a bridge between the cultures of the world. The positive response of the public as well as international respect has confirmed the unusual concept of the JACARANDA ENSEMBLE. Concert tours within Germany and abroad, as well as a positive reaction from the media are the visible results of this artistic endeavor.
